LEADER: This SIUC official made history as the first African-American to play Saluki basketball and complete the Air Force ROTC program on campus.

KISS SHOT:

Harvey Welch, vice chancellor for Student Affairs, was the first African-American basketball player to play at SIUC. Welch started playing in the fall of 1951.

CHAMPION: Welch says Woods' victory on the green helps establish a positive role model for minorities.

As Harvey Welch proudly stood beside Tiger Woods' father while Woods earned a championship title in golf, making him the youngest and the first African-American to win the Masters, Welch felt an intense mixture of emotions.

"I felt so liberated," said Welch, the vice chancellor for Student Affairs and a member of United States Golf Association. "I was crying. I was laughing. I felt every human emotion. It was just a good feeling, and I hope what Tiger did will have a more international impact on youngsters."

It is Welch's hope that Woods' accomplishment earlier this month will serve as motivation for other African-American youth to become involved in the sport.

"I believe there are a lot more potential Tigers out there. If young people want to put in the time and discipline to learn the game," said Welch, who has played golf with Tiger Woods' father.

Black youth are intimidated by the sport because of several factors, which Welch said include financial, discriminatory and social barriers.

"One of the most prevalent problems is not having enough black professionals to act as role models to get our youth involved in golf," he said.

"I think the game of golf is synonymous with the game of life. I want all people, but particularly African Americans, to be exposed to golf for the many attributes that playing golf by the rules will allow them to acquire. And it is then my hope that we will transition much of this into how we conduct our lives."

When golf first was established in United States, it was intended for the wealthy, which Welch said excluded blacks.

Welch breaks barriers

TRAVIS AKIN

Major League Baseball is honoring Jackie Robinson for being the first to break the color barrier, but there is one person locally who has had similar triumphs.

In 1951, Harvey Welch, the current vice chancellor of Student Affairs, was the first African-American to suit up as an SIUC basketball player.

Because of the discrimination against African-American athletes of the time, Welch's mother had some conditions for SIUC coach Lynn Holder before letting Welch play.

"She wanted me to play when the team plays and to go in the same door as they go in," he said. "Lynn's word was his bond. He said, 'Your son will be treated like a first-class citizen with every member of the team.'"

Welch ate with the team and slept in hotel rooms with teammates, and Holder took games in the South off the schedule to keep his word to Welch's mother.

While the University was integrated, and the team treated Welch as an equal, the community was much different.

Carbondale's neighborhoods and schools were segregated. Attucks Grade School and Attucks High School were all black schools, while there were other schools for whites.

African Americans had to watch movies in the balconies of the theaters and were not allowed to eat at some restaurants.

During Thanksgiving break, this caused a problem for Welch because the school cafeteria was closed, and he had to stay in Carbondale for basketball practice.

"The only place black folks could eat was a little cafe in the old train station," he said. "Everything else was closed or not

Proposed fee increase could hurt non-athletes

NOT FEASIBLE: GPSC president says plan will only help a small portion of the student body.

Athletic Funding

No. 3 of 3

If the SIU Board of Trustees approves an 85-percent athletic-fee increase and also adopts a recommendation to cap tuition and fees, some student leaders and administrators say other SIUC services may not be able to obtain needed funds.

The trustees are scheduled to vote in June on a proposal to increase the annual full-time student athletic fee from the 1997 rate of $106 to $196 by 2002. A portion of this money would be used by the Athletic Department to pay interest on the $1.5-million in bonds it sold to generate funds to repair aging facilities and to build a softball clubhouse.

At the same time, the trustees also will vote on a proposal that could cap the rate at which the University can increase tuition and fees. This cap could mirror the rate of inflation, or the board could vote to charge fees at a flat rate.

The proposal comes on the heels of an Illinois Board of Higher Education recommendation for state universities to provide students with a four-year projection of the cost of education.

Don Wilson, SIU vice president for University Services and board treasurer, said if the board votes for a tuition and fees cap, the large athletic-fee increase could stifle the ability of other fee areas, such as University Housing, to obtain needed funds.

"There is a trade-off with the increase if the board votes to cap tuition," Wilson said. "If the athletic fee goes up this much, some other fee areas will be limited in the amount of fees they can collect."

Wilson said it is likely that the board will vote to either cap fee increases or DOGS IN HEAVEN? Lecturer attempts to reconcile views on animal immortality.

TAMEKA HICKS
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

In a home filled with 12 pets, including three sheep, Elizabeth George says animals have more to offer the world than being a source of food.

"The body is valuable, but there is more to a human being and to animals than the body," George said. "There is a need to bring back to our attention the spiritual reality of life."

Her six-chapter dissertation, which won the SIUC Outstanding Dissertation award, supports her theory that animals have souls. She will receive a $1,000 award during commencement ceremonies May 9.

"I always sort of thought that animals had souls, but I never found anyone who would agree with me," George, a history lecturer, said. "People would just laugh about it."

George spent two years researching her dissertation by tracing the Western concept of animal immortality through the ages. In her work, she defines the soul as the individualized personal consciousness that survives the death of the body.

After finding conflicting views of Christian and Greek theories on animal immortality, George concluded that animals have souls.

In the Old Testament, when a living soul was mentioned, it applied to both humans and animals, George said. The Ten Commandments state that both humans and animals should reserve one day of the week for rest.

George disagrees with the theories of Greek philosophers such as Plato and Pythagoras, who believed that animals had no souls, but could be reincarnated. The Greeks believed having a soul meant having emotions, and animals do not have emotions the way humans do.

Another theory George disagreed with was one of Thomas Aquinas, a 13th century theologian, who said animals do not have souls because they do not have the human ability to think and reason.

The disciplines of philosophy, science and theology included in the research are what George said made her topic different and made people think about the humane treatment of animals.

Dean of Graduate School to leave SIUC July 1

John H. Yopp, associate vice chancellor for Academic Affairs and research and Graduate School dean, is leaving SIUC to accept a position in New Jersey on July 1.

He will become vice president for graduate and professional education with Educational Testing Service in Princeton, N.J.

In May, the Graduate Council will discuss finding an acting dean to replace Yopp. John S. Jackson, vice chancellor for Academic Affairs and provost, has said it is not yet known whether the acting dean will be hired from within the University.

Yopp has been employed by the University for 27 years, 11 in his present position. He was associate dean for research in the College of Science from 1984 to 1986. He came to the University in 1970 as a botany instructor and helped establish SIUC's Gene Molecular Biology Program. He received the University's outstanding teacher award in 1981.

LONDON

Labor Party, Blair expected to win election Thursday

Unless pollsters, pundits and parties are colossally wrong, Labor Party insurgent Tony Blair will win Thursday's election going away, overturning 18 years of rule by Margaret Thatcher and her Conservative heirs.

After a month of actual campaigning, the Labor margin over Prime Minister John Major's Tories is counted in the high teens, about where it was when hostilities began.

Indeed, personalities dominate, because on the issues, there is little to choose between the parties. Under Blair, Labor has swung from socialism to a free market economy. The electoral fulcrum thus balances on which party can best make Britain's welfare state work better. "Trust" is the call sign of both.

Saturday night fever: Library needs later hours

I am not a party girl. If all the bars in Carbondale raised their entry age to 45, kegs were outlawed, and the entire alcohol industry went beer-belly-up, I probably wouldn't notice. I'd be too busy trying to smuggle back issues of "Snakespeare Quarterly" out of the library before it closed.

SIUC administrators spend an inordinate amount of time sniveling about the University's "party school" image — as well they should.

Yes, there are a number of students on this campus who are hoping to proficiency out of their life-science requirement by dissecting the worm at the bottom of the tequila bottle. And yes, there are a number of students whose entire knowledge of foreign languages consists of remembering the difference between Swedish (Absolut) and Russian (Smirnoff).

However, some of us actually came here to learn.

I appreciate the University's efforts to ensure that I am not inside straining my eyes over some massive tome until 2 a.m. when I should be showing my Saluki pride by winning a beer-guzzling competition somewhere.

Still, one would think that a university fighting a reputation like SIUC's would bend over backwards to accommodate those students who want to learn something besides their Miranda rights on a Saturday night.

Apparently not.

I had a rare Saturday off not long ago, so — being a dedicated student teacher — I decided to use the time to work on a lesson plan.

I assumed I could wander into the library at 5 p.m., spend three or four hours taking notes on Eudora Welty, and return to class Monday morning well-equipped to handle any question my students might ask.

This was not to be.

In a move demonstrating its obvious level of dedication to facilitating students' academic pursuits, the University has decided that 6 p.m. is the appropriate time to lock up the library on Saturdays.

After wasting a third of the hour I had fighting with a stubborn computer, I was informed that the on-line card catalog was down for the weekend.

Undaunted, I made a beeline for the reference section, where I was sure I could find enough information to complete my lesson.

A short biography and a few excerpts from essays on the author's work would be sufficient for my juniors, most of whom consider literary criticism almost as cool as Donny Osmond albums and orthopedic shoes.

I tried checking out an enormous book so I could study in the comfort of my living-room floor between bites of Häagen-Dazs and glimpses of "Absolutely Fabulous" videos.

Denied.

God forbid I should check out a book — I mean, you'd think it was a library or something.

With 12 minutes left to closing time, I decided to cut my losses and just Xerox the essays I needed.

Unable to locate my copy card or an adequate number of dimes to do the job, I made a mad dash downstairs to cram a couple of dollars into the machine. (In its relentless pursuit of patron assistance, Morris Library features copy card machines in a convenient location to serve me.)

Two minutes later, I glanced at the clock and saw ... nothing.

The lights had gone out, signaling that Cinderella the Hostile Student Worker had to leave for a hot date with Bureaucrat Charming before his horn-rimmed glasses turned back into a pumpkin.

I asked her if I could leave the books on top of a nearby file cabinet and come back as soon as the library opened the next day to finish making my copies.

She looked at me as if I had completely lost my mind and said, as if leaving them where they were instead of putting them away were a huge inconvenience for her, "They might not be there tomorrow."

I was tempted to ask where I should sign up to join the fairies who were going to put them away while she was out with Mr. Wonderful.

I understood that Cinderella would like to leave when her shift is over, but for what we pay in student fees every semester, it seems as if SIUC could afford a crew of underpaid student workers to relieve Cinderella and company on Saturday nights.

It's not like this is a university or anything.

Exhausted by the whole experience, I decided I needed a stiff drink.

Maybe the waitress wouldn't mind if I left her my Xerox card and a bootleg copy of somebody's dissertation on "Much Ado About Nothing" as a tip.

Besides, I thought, if enough displaced bookworms ended up on the Strip, we might be able to incite a riot and take the library.

Our Word

Under control

State campaign funding system needs much tighter regulations

IT IS TIME TO BRING CAMPAIGN FINANCING in Illinois under control by making laws more strict and enforceable.

Over the last decade, the cost of a small state district race has increased from a few thousand dollars to more than $500,000. Last year, incumbent state Rep. Mike Bost, R-Murphysboro, and his opponent, John Rendleman, spent more than $600,000 in a three-county district race.

Financing that district race has increased from two years ago when Bost and his opponent spent $417,000. Although that local district was targeted by both political leaders in the Illinois House, the amount of money spent was a gross example of how campaign finance is a problem in Illinois.

ALSO, BOTH CANDIDATES IN THE 58TH state Senate district spent a total of more than $1 million on a tiny, seven-county district. Campaign finance has increased at an alarming rate, and these days campaign spending is spent on purchasing media and other expenses.

Money is the mother's milk of politics. But having so much money from outside the districts invested in campaign races raises questions of candidates' accountability to their own legislative districts.

It's a well-known fact that the majority of the money spent on targeted campaign races is funneled from interest groups and legislative party leaders. In fact, some candidates receive professional campaign assistance and large sums of money outside their districts.

FOR THE MOST PART, LOCAL LEGISLATORS have been diligent in working for their districts' interests. From getting funds to repair SIUC's power grid to keeping Amtrak in Carbondale, Bost and state Sen. Dave Luechtefeld, R-Okawville, have served Southern Illinois.

But they received most of their campaign financing from their party leaders and interest groups from outside the district.

Somewhere down the road they will be obligated — in some way or another — to those leaders and interest groups that invested a lot of money to their campaigns. Capping the money raised outside the district and making campaign laws more enforceable would make candidates more accountable to their districts and less obligated to the powers upstate.

THE PUBLIC HAS CRIED OUT FOR campaign finance reform. In a study completed this year by investigators at the University of Illinois at Springfield, 67 percent of the Illinois public believe that legislative leaders should not be able to raise money statewide and then funnel the money down to legislative races. The research also has shown that there is a strong public support to push reform legislation.

In Illinois, there are no limits on how much political action committees, individuals, labor unions and regulated industries can contribute to campaigns.

In contrast, neighboring Missouri has $200 limits on all of these items. Although many contributors may not be trying to "buy" a candidate, the possible environment for this kind of corruption exists.

THE LAX CAMPAIGN FINANCE LAWS in this state have given the public one more reason to be cynical about government and skeptical about what our legislators can do for their districts. Making campaign laws stricter can defuse a lot of that distrust and would help make legislators more accountable to their districts.

Union to vote on new officers

EMPOWERED:

Members will elect new representatives Tuesday.

WILLIAM HATFIELD
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Faculty union elections will allow new members to vote for president and vice president and let new members serve as executive and legislative officers in the union's executive and representative councils.

Polls will be open between 11 a.m. and 3:45 p.m. Tuesday in the Student Center Auditorium.

Michael Dotson, a member of the faculty union election committee, said that only members of the Illinois Education Association/National Education Association can vote in the elections.

The elections are being conducted now so union members who have joined the faculty union since the faculty voted to unionize in November can serve in elected positions.

Athletic-fee increase drawing criticism from non-athletes

COMPETING VIEWS:

Athletic department says improved facilities would aid recruitment.

MARC CHASE
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

As an SIUC graduate student in linguistics who does not go to many athletic events, Ed Ford says he and other students like him should not have to pay for a system they do not use.

Ford, who represents the Linguistics Department on the Graduate and Professional Student Council, does not agree with a proposed 85-percent student athletic-fee increase that would be implemented over five years. And he particularly disagrees with what some of this student money would help fund — a study lounge for SIUC athletes only.

"Those things not directly related to the many should not be funded by the many," Ford said. "And, in terms of the study lounge, personally I would prefer to see student fees not going to something that will have such a restricted use."

The lounge would be part of a $400,000 addition to the SIU Arena. Part of the project would expand the lower level of the building to make room for an athletic laundry facility. An already existing study lounge on the upper level of the building would then be expanded over the laundry area.

This addition is part of several improvements to athletic facilities to be funded by $1.5 million in bonds sold by the University. Part of the revenue from the athletic-fee increase would be used to pay off the interest on the bonds.

Nancy Bandy, assistant athletics director, said the improved lounge would be an attractive tool in helping recruit quality athletes.

She said many other institutions that have athletic programs similar to SIUC's program have immaculate study lounges for athletes only.

She cited Illinois State, Indiana State and Southwest Missouri State universities as schools that have such facilities. Those universities also use the facilities as recruiting tools.

But while Ford maintains that all students should not pay for a facility that not all students will be able to use, GPSC President Mark Terry has a different perspective.

"I understand Ed's (Ford's) point, but there are also competitive considerations," Terry said. "And, given athletes' busy schedules, I wouldn't have a problem with an athletic study lounge."

"I want to see us do whatever we can to improve the graduation rate as long as it's fiscally sound."

But SIUC Chancellor Don Beggs said Ford and other students who are opposed to the study lounge have a legitimate concern.

"In terms of priorities, the study lounge is not one of mine," Beggs said. "It might be better to offer something with a more open environment. We may have to rethink our priorities."

dents, would suffer.

GPSC Representative Ed Ford agrees with Terry. He said if the University wants to impose a large fee increase, it should do so in an area that affects most or all students.

"I'm not sure, especially with the fiscal constraints that we have, that this kind of money should be put into the athletic program," Ford said.

But Jim Hart, Saluki athletic director, argues that his department does benefit the entire University. He said that without needed revenue, the Athletic Department cannot be competitive with programs at other schools and bring prestige to SIUC.

20th century will help people understand the importance of its content.

"She did the type of dissertation that establishes the importance of the debate that animal immortality had in the context of Darwin's theory of evolution and the modern developments within Christianity," he said.

Methodist theologian John Wesley thought that animals did have souls and an afterlife. He believed that because of their innocence, animals will go to heaven.

George also believes that animals will go to heaven because they are living things and possess innocence. She said people can learn from animals' patience, innocence and beauty, but people rarely think of human mortality and even less of animals' value.

"They really are an important part of human life," she said. "There's a lot of interaction between human beings and animals."

open to black people. That was kind of lonesome because I didn't have anybody to relate to."

Teammates drove him to the cafe, but he had to walk back by himself while the rest of the team was able to relax in the popular restaurants and clubs in town.

Sometimes Welch also experienced racism on the road. In a game against Southeast Missouri State University, racism was evident by the actions of a small child who caught a loose ball that Welch went to retrieve.

"(The child) waited till I got right up on him," Welch said. "Then that little bastard threw the ball at me as hard as he could."

Welch grew up in a single-parent family in Centralia. His father died when he was young.

At the time, Centralia was on the verge of becoming integrated. There were several all-white grade schools and one all-black grade school. These schools sent all of their students to one integrated high school.

Welch was valedictorian at the all-black grade school and achieved national honors status at the high school, and he was the first African American to have a class office at the high school.

Welch always has excelled, said William Norwood, a member of the SIU Board of Trustees.

Norwood has known Welch since they were in high school in Centralia.

"Initially, when I met him, I thought he was a goal-oriented person," he said. "He had the tenacity to go after something and do it very well."

The philosophy of excellence is something Welch took with him to the court.

After graduating from high school in 1950, he attended Centralia Township Junior College.

Following a game between Welch's junior college basketball team and the SIUC junior varsity team, SIUC coach Holder offered Welch a scholarship.

In the fall of 1951, Welch brought his trademark two-handed kiss shot to SIUC and was a starting forward. The two-handed kiss shot is where on a jump shot, a player holds the ball with two hands, brings it back to the face touching the lips, then lets it fly.

In his first season, Welch was the team's second leading scorer with 218 points and an average of 9.9 points a game.

In the 1952-53 season, he was third in scoring on the team with 256 points in 24 games, with an average of 10.7 points a game. He also was elected that year to an all-conference team.

The lithe, 6-foot-2, Welch played forward, guard and center and continued to put up high scores despite a few injuries. In his first game at guard on Dec. 20, 1952, Welch scored 24 points against Central Michigan.

During one point of the 1953-54 season, Welch scored 71 points in a span of three games. That same season he led the Salukis with 248 points and was named to the Illinois

Interstate Athletic Conference all-conference team.

But basketball was not the only first Welch accomplished. He was the first African American at SIUC to finish the Air Force ROTC program.

To friends such as Seymour Bryson, director of the Affirmative Action office, Welch is a person who took what Robinson did and became a leader in the community.

"In each community there was a Jackie Robinson," Bryson said. "Not all were able to reach the level he reached, but what Jackie Robinson did was open doors."

Welch also opened doors by helping his three sons, Harvey C., Gordon and Patrick, and his daughter, Karen, get through college.

As a leader in the Air Force, he was one of only three African Americans in the country to be promoted to colonel in 1971. He became the dean of Student Life at SIUC after his retirement from the Air Force in 1975.

Since then, Welch and his wife Patricia, a hotel restaurant travel and administration professor, have strived to help students achieve their full potential. Welch helps students get financial aid and has an open-door policy for students who have problems.

As an administrator, he sees himself as just that — an administrator who wants all people to get along.

"I view myself as not an African-American vice chancellor, but as a vice chancellor who happens to be an African American," he said. "It does not matter how you look, you can make changes being gentle."

Welch has a serious attitude about involving youth in the game and is willing to make any contributions to enlighten them about the sport.

"If a kid gets involved in golf because of my contributions, then that is very rewarding and satisfying," he said.

He is now a part of an organization geared toward embracing minorities in golf.

Welch, who is involved with the National Minority Golf Foundation, said minorities will become increasingly active in all aspects of golf, including playing the sport, the management and operation of clubs, architecture and sales.

If more youth became involved in the sport, Welch said it could enhance their character and build a solid understanding for future generations.

"I want young people to play because it is an individual sport where you and you alone compete your skills against the golf course and the elements," he said. "It is a game that requires an individual to be perfectly honest with themselves. If you play by the rules, you will become a self-actualizing person."

And while there may be a lack of active participation, there are African-American students, such as Michael Banks, who are intrigued with the game.

Banks, a sophomore in computer science from Chicago, said his uncle introduced him to the sport while he was in high school. He owns nine left-handed golf clubs, his own balls and tees.

However, there is one missing component hindering the game from being fully enjoyable for Banks.

"None of my friends have been exposed to it, so they think it's something bad," he said. "A lot of them believe black people are only supposed to play baseball and basketball."

"I think it would be fun as something different for us to do instead of the same old thing. I mean, they shouldn't knock it because it is different. Something different . . . that is nothing but a plus."

Banks is more than aware of the barriers that prevent most African Americans from participating in the sport. He said most black people cannot afford golf equipment or the cost of actually paying for time on a course. He said there still are golf organizations that exercise racial discrimination.

"If you play by the rules, you will become a self-actualizing person."

HARVEY WELCH
VICE CHANCELLOR OF STUDENT AFFAIRS

"You have to educate people about the game and calm their fears — let them know that it's nothing bad about wanting to do something like playing golf," Banks said.

Welch said there are a number of solutions to ease minorities' anxieties about golf.

"I feel that when we're getting someone to venture out and try something new, if we can reduce the anxiety associated with it (and) if we can do that in an area that's close to their neighborhood, where they are more comfortable, then we have a greater chance (that they will become involved)," Welch said.

Another factor hindering some minorities from becoming involved is a fear of being "a first." Welch said the best thing to do is recognize the barriers and then confront them.

"In relevance to golf, for those who want to partake of it, let's get involved," he said.

"We don't need to come in like, 'I may get run off here.' We need to walk in proud and confident that we know what we're going to do. We're going to start playing golf. We know the history of the game. We know the rules. And just let me play."

Islands are stepping stones for moving drugs

DRUG DEN: Hundreds of tons of cocaine move through the Caribbean.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

BASSETTERRE, St. Kitts—With its palm trees, pastel gingerbread houses and friendly shopkeepers and hoteliers, this tropical port long has been a haven for British and U.S. tourists.

But in recent years, its Caribbean calm has been broken by a laundry list of violent events: A former U.N. ambassador disappeared and was presumed dead; police found the body of the scion of a politically powerful family stuffed in the trunk of a burned-out car; the inspector investigating the cases was killed in broad daylight.

Scotland Yard was brought in to try to solve those mysteries and ease the ensuing political crisis.

But police now believe the three men were all victims of a growing wave of violence and corruption sparked by the new presence here of Colombian drug lords.

Confronted with intensified interdiction efforts in the Bahamas and at the U.S.-Mexico border — and with the growing distrust of their Mexican allies — Colombian cartel members have pushed their drug trafficking deep into the eastern Caribbean, experts say.

About one-third of the cocaine available in the United States and one-half to two-thirds of that sold in Europe — hundreds of tons of the drug — is shipped through the tiny islands of this region.

Traffickers in small planes and swift boats are following the necklace of islands from the Colombian coast eastward to the edge of the Caribbean and then on to the U.S. Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico, officials say. Once in U.S. territory, they can move drugs to the mainland with no fear of customs inspections.

Similarly, former and current Dutch, British and French colonies are providing the cartels with easy access to Europe.

The traffickers are inflicting on the region what Caribbean security expert Ivelaw Griffith calls the "package": They are blamed for increases in money laundering, addiction and corruption so profound that they threaten to put criminals in charge of the government and the economy.

"This is probably the best scenario a drug trafficker could invent," said Sander Calvani, who heads the U.N. Drug Control Program's Caribbean office. "In the south, big producing countries. In the north, big consuming countries. And in between, 1,200 islands organized in 29 countries with four different (government) systems that do not communicate among themselves and (with) an infinite number of coves and small beaches."

Richard Thomas, the top British official in the region, compares the upsurge in narcotics trafficking today to the perceived threat of communism that provoked the U.S. invasion of Grenada in 1983. "In the intervening 14 years, that threat has dwindled to almost nothing, but the threat to stability is now drug trafficking," he said.

The number of tourists complaining that they have been approached by drug dealers in Barbados has quadrupled over the past six months, Calvani said.

The U.S. State Department has reported that there is extensive money laundering in Aruba, the island closest to Colombia. Officials also note an increase in both cocaine and heroin trafficking there. A U.N. internal document says that 75 percent of all arrests in Aruba are now drug-related.

Recently published Dutch intelligence reports cite "worrying indications" that Aruban democracy is being eroded by money laundering linked to the drug trade — an allegation denied by the Aruban government.

As more Caribbean countries try to develop offshore banking, the threat of drug-related money laundering will increase, law enforcement authorities warn.

Still, its mixed counter-narcotics results show the uphill battle the small countries of the eastern Caribbean face, diplomats and law enforcement experts agree.

"This is not the gulf war," expert Calvani said, referring to the U.S.-led alliance's quick defeat of Iraq in 1991. "It is not something that we are going to win next year or in the next five years. ... Now is the time when significant decisions of strategy will affect what will be the result in the next five to 10 years."

will serve on the executive board and represent all faculty.

Dotson said faculty union members nominated candidates in Tuesday's election. The election committee then contacted the nominees to see if they wanted to be on the ballot.

Write-in votes will be permitted on the ballot for all elected positions.

Jim Sullivan, current faculty union president, said that immediately after the November vote to unionize, a temporary executive board was formed so that the union could work immediately.

Sullivan would not give an exact number of faculty union members but said they are growing every day.

"We are heading towards 50 percent and hoping to achieve it in the near future," he said.

The union represents more than 740 tenured and tenure-track faculty in contract negotiations with the administration, which began in March.

Sullivan said all faculty members are invited to attend and can join the union there.

Egyptian Directory

from the Daily Egyptian

The Internet is about business. Daily Egyptian web site gets about 100,000 hits a month and growing. Property managers advertising in our online edition are having tremendous success. Proof that people are turning to the Internet for purchase information. Listing in the Egyptian Directory will help your business. Let the people know you are there. Sometimes before they even come to town.

Egyptian Directory is a searchable directory service that directs customers to your "real world" address, your telephone number, or your web address.

Egyptian Directory is like the printed Yellow Pages, but with a some notable advantages that add to your listing:

- ★ With a line ad, customers can search for your specific business offerings!
 - ★ Product listings, menus, and delivery policies are be listed and searched!
 - ★ List special events like movies, bands, exhibits, shows, sermons, plays...
 - ★ Purchase the account manager package and manage your own listing as often as you choose!
- We made it real cheap—so it's a no-brainer!

If you already have a web site for your business, Egyptian Directory helps direct people to it. The Daily Egyptian web site already gets a great deal of traffic. Together, the DE and Egyptian Directory will pull traffic into your web site like never before. If you don't have a web site, the line description that Egyptian Directory offers may be all you need, and in any event will get your business on the Internet immediately.

Expanded web pages featuring items such as additional descriptions, graphics, logos, VR movies, as well as management accounts so YOU can manage the information directly. Check it out for yourself. Point your browser at www.dailyegyptian.com and click NEW

Dawgs sweep Bluejays

BACK ON TRACK:

Baseball Salukis blowout a conference foe, improving their record to an even 10-10.

MICHAEL DEFORD
DE SPORTS EDITOR

It took just two days for the baseball Salukis to sweep a four-game series against Creighton University and jump from seventh to fourth place in the conference standings.

The Salukis won Saturday's games 11-4 and 8-3, then took Sunday's games 12-11 and 9-5 for the series sweep in Omaha and improve their chances of a conference tournament appearance.

Heading into the weekend series SIUC had two choices. Either have a solid outing to keep their Missouri Valley Conference tournament hopes alive, or fall flat on their face and possibly lose any chance of making the six-team tournament.

The Salukis chose the former, improving to 10-10 along the way. Thanks to the sweep, SIUC put themselves into a fourth place tie with Illinois State University.

The Bluejays were in fourth place in the conference prior to the sweep, but the four losses dropped them to 7-10.

"It was a couple of long days at the yard but it was well worth it," Saluki coach Dan Callahan said. "It's tough to sweep anybody in this conference, let alone do it on the road."

REGULAR

•The Salukis travel to Terre Haute, Ind., for a four game series against Indiana State beginning Friday at 7 p.m.

Creighton is not necessarily dog-meat. We just found a way to win."

The four-game series sweep against a conference foe was SIUC's first since 1990, when the Salukis took four games from Illinois State University in Normal.

SIUC swept the

SIUC	11	11	12	9
Creighton	4	3	11	5

Bluejays with a strong effort from the mound and a balanced attack from the plate.

Callahan threw 10 pitchers at the Bluejays, getting solid outings in his starters and relievers.

"With just a couple exceptions, I thought we threw really well this weekend," Callahan said. "For the most part we got some quality pitching."

Scoring 40 runs didn't hurt either.

Callahan even credits SIUC's bench, who he said helped rattle Creighton's pitching staff and motivate his own.

"It's one of the few times that I remember where I felt like our bench made a difference," Callahan said. "Our bench was very upbeat, very emotional and very loud. I thought our bench got into a couple of their pitchers' heads."

"I guess in baseball if there is such a thing as a 10th man, you could say that our bench made a difference."

With only eight conference games remaining in the regular season, the weekend-sweep of Creighton improved SIUC's chances of making the six-team conference tournament, which gets underway May 14 in Wichita, Kansas.

Callahan figured his club needed to win eight of their last 12 games to get into the tournament field.

"We thought going into this weekend with 12 conference games to go, we felt like we needed to win eight out of 12... maybe nine and get some help along the way," Callahan said. "It turned out to be an ideal weekend."

Brown may take over Boston

Indiana Pacers coach Larry Brown will meet with Boston Celtics owner Paul Gaston this week to discuss replacing M. L. Carr as head coach. Carr is expected to give up the job he has had for the last two seasons after Boston posted the worst record in franchise history. Boston was a paltry 15-67 this season. Carr's job as director of basketball operations also appears to be in jeopardy.

Dunleavy's departure leaves Bucks searching for answers

The Milwaukee Bucks are in search of new leadership after the resignation of Mike Dunleavy as vice president of basketball operations and general manager of the Milwaukee Bucks. Dunleavy announced his resignation Saturday, as the Bucks missed the playoffs for the sixth straight season. Dunleavy was fired as head coach a year ago. Dunleavy was under an eight-year contract that was to take him through the 1999-2000 season, but he called it quits because he was unable to turn the club into playoff material. "I am sorry that I did not get to accomplish what I and the organization wanted to — get back into the playoffs," Dunleavy said.

MLB

White out for a month

Florida Marlins centerfielder Devon White is expected to be sidelined for at least a month after undergoing surgery on his left knee Saturday. He had the surgery to have torn cartilage repaired in his left knee. The 34-year-old White is unsure about when he suffered the injury, but the knee has been bothering him for a week. White is on the 15-day disabled list, retroactive to April 24. He is hitting .245 with six doubles and five RBIs this season and is second on the club with 13 walks.

GOLF

James holds off Norman

England's Mark James captured the Spanish Open in Madrid this weekend when Greg Norman bogeyed the third playoff hole. Norman, who forced the playoff with a 20-foot putt on the final hole of regulation, missed the green on the short par-3 17th hole and settled for a four, while James knocked in a three-footer for par and the victory. James finished the four-day event at 11-under-par 277, including a three-under 69 Sunday. He recorded his 18th career European Tour victory and his first since claiming the Moroccan Open 25 months ago. James, a seven-time Ryder Cup player, had a chance to win in regulation, but three-putted on the final green. Norman, who entered Sunday's play with a one-shot advantage, shot a 70 in the final round.

SIUC humbles top MVC rivals

Curtis K. Buss/Daily Egyptian

WEEKEND HERO: Saluki pitcher Jamie Schutteck, a senior from Herrin, delivers a pitch during the first game of SIUC's doubleheader against Drake at IAW Fields Saturday afternoon. Schutteck, who extended her record to 24-1, was 2-0 with a save this weekend against conference rivals Drake and Creighton.

SOFTBALL SHOWDOWN:

Salukis win three of four games in two doubleheaders against conference foes.

DONNA COLTER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Senior pitcher Jamie Schutteck's 16th-career homerun in the top of the third inning saved the SIUC softball team in game two of a double header, in which the Salukis beat Creighton University 5-3 Sunday at IAW fields.

SIUC also won game one of the doubleheader 3-2.

The homer was the seventh this season for Schutteck, and it also tied her for the record for most homeruns in a career.

"I don't go up there looking to hit a homerun. But I got a high pitch, and I was able to do it," Schutteck said.

Schutteck also picked up her 24th win of the season in game one, pacing SIUC to a 3-2 win. The hurler picked up her third save of the season in game two, while freshman Tracy Rempsecher picked up her third win.

"I told Tracy she threw a heck of a game," Schutteck said. "I didn't realize how good it was. (The umpire) was squeezing the strike zone. It was frustrating."

SIUC coach Kay Brechtelsbauer was pleased to see the Salukis hang tough both games.

"These were huge wins for us," she said. "If we didn't sweep them today, our chance of winning league play was out the window."

"Tracy gave us some great innings. We needed those innings."

The two wins propelled SIUC to 35-14.

Salukis run strong against nation's best

AMONG THE BEST:
SIUC track squads bring home numerous top-ten finishes.

RYAN KEITH
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Uncertainty turned into a solid showing against the nation's top collegiate teams at the Drake Relays this weekend for SIUC women's track and field sprinter Donna Wechet and her teammates.

Performing in front of a crowd of more than 17,000 fans, the Saluki women earned nine finishes in the top 10 and the Saluki men earned two finishes in the top five at one of the nation's biggest meets Wednesday through Saturday in Des Moines, Iowa.

Wechet said the team members went in to the meet unsure about how they would perform.

"For the caliber of competition that we competed against, it really showed how tough we are," Wechet said.

SIUC women's coach Don DeNoon said his team's efforts were impressive.

"We ran a lot of lifetime bests even though we didn't finish at the top," DeNoon said.

The Salukis' shuttle hurdle relay team of senior Heather Greeling, freshman Drosos Lavithi, sophomore Natasha Robinson and Wechet finished in fourth place with a time of 59.35, the second-fastest time in SIUC history.

Wechet, a senior, said the relay team's performance was not expected after their preliminary races.

"In the preliminary heats, we didn't finish very well," Wechet said. "But we turned it around in the finals and did much better."

SIUC was paced by the team's heptathletes, junior Lorraine Parkinson and Greeling, who competed Wednesday and Thursday. Parkinson grabbed the Salukis' top finish by earning third place in the heptathlon with a personal best of 4,818 points. Greeling finished right behind Parkinson in fourth place with 4,715 points.

DeNoon said Parkinson and Greeling's performances could have been even better if they had performed later in the week.

"They both did a good job," DeNoon said. "Their point totals weren't great, but the temperatures were pretty cool until Friday up there."

SIUC's 4 x 400 meter relay team finished sixth with a time of
